Setting aside and striking out interrogatories ground that they have been exhibited unreasonably or vexatiously, or struck out on the ground that they are prolix, oppressive, unnecessary or scandalous; and any application for this purpose may be made within seven days after service of the interrogatories.

Scope—This rule deals with two cases, first, where interrogatories are exhibited which are not objectionable, but which, by reason of the circumstances of the case, are vexatious or oppressive, and secondly, where interrogatories are exhibited which are prolix, or unnecessary, or otherwise objectionable. If the judge thinks that interrogatories as a whole, or enblock, are vexatious or unreasonable, he may strike out the whole of them without sifting the mass for the purpose of saving those questions which may be reasonable and fit. And he may, if he thinks proper, allow the parties whose interrogatories have been struck out to administer interrogatories again to the opposite party. Cawley v. Burton, 32 W. R. 33. If the judge considers a set of interrogatories to be as a whole prolix, oppressive, or unnecessary, he has power to strike them all out, though some of them may be unobjectionable. Oppenheim v. Sacfield, (1893) 1 Q. B. 5. Objections to answer to interrogatories must be specific. Carroll v. Perry, 36 L. T. 513. A party who applies to strike interrogatories must, unless they are altogether an abuse of the practice of the Court, specify those to which he objects. Allsassen v. Lobachlers, 3 Q. B. 8. [R. S. C. O. 31, r. 8.] Interrogatories shall be answered by affidavit to be filed within ten days, or within such other time as the Court may allow.

Scope—The defendant cannot refuse to answer on the ground that they have no personal knowledge of the matter interrogated. Patterson v. North Metropolitan, 45 L. T. 732. A party to a cause is not excused from answering interrogatories relevant to the question in issue on the ground that they are as to matters which are not within such party's own knowledge, but are only within the knowledge of his agents or servants, if derived in the ordinary course of their employment, and he requires him to do so, as that, either such agents or servants would incur unreasonable expense, or for the like. *Boehm v. determined by the Court

Scope—The duty of the Court, with reference to answers to interrogatories, is regulated by rules 10, 11, and 12 in considering the sufficiency or insufficiency of the answers, i.e. whether the party interrogated has answered that which he has no excuse for not answering—and only in the case of insufficiency can it require a further answer. *Field v. ### Summoning and Attendance of Witnesses

1 [S 159] At any time after the suit is instituted, the parties may obtain, on application to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf, summonses to persons whose attendance is required, either to give evidence or to produce documents.

Distinction between rules 2 and 3—Rule 2 which finds a place in the chapter of adjournments provides that if on any day, to which the hearing of the suit is adjourned the parties or any of them fail to appear the court may proceed to dispose of the suit in one of the modes directed in that behalf by order IX, or make such order as it thinks fit. The effect of this rule is to make rule 8 of order IX applicable to adjourned hearing of the cases (23 C 738). Rule 3 then provides that if any party to a suit, to whom time has been granted, fails to produce his evidence or to cause the attendance of his witnesses or to perform any other act necessary to the further progress of the suit for which time has been allowed, the court may notwithstanding such default, proceed to decide the case forthwith. It is obvious that the scope of rule 2 is quite distinct from that of rule 3. Rule 3 appears to contemplate a case in which the court has materials before it to enable it to proceed to a decision of the suit. What rule 3 provides is, that the mere fact of a party making default in performance of what he was directed to do would not lead to the dismissal of the plaintiff's suit if he was the party in default, or the decreeing of the claim against the defendant if the defendant was the person who made the default; the words notwithstanding such default clearly imply that the court is to proceed with the disposal of the suit in spite of the default upon such materials as are before it. Rule 2 on the other hand speaks of the disposal of the suit and undoubtedly includes cases in which there might not be any materials before the court to enable it to pronounce a decision on the merits. It is clear that the contingency contemplated in rule 2 may happen in a case which falls within the letter of rule 3. It may well happen, for instance, that a plaintiff only fails to do so, but materials on the record, the rule 2, but if there are materials on the record the Court ought to proceed under rule 3 34 C 235 (237 238) see also 41 C 956=18 C W N 775 Order IX, rule 6 provides for hearing of the suit on the day fixed in the summons for the defendant's appearance, whereas Order XVII rule 2 does for hearing of the suit at some later stage In

Preliminary decree in foreclosure suit

"2 (1) In a suit for foreclosure, if the plaintiff succeeds the Court shall pass a preliminary decree—

(a) ordering that an account be taken of what was due to the plaintiff at the date of such decree for—

(i) principal and interest on the mortgage,

(ii) the costs of suit, if any, awarded to him, and

(iii) other costs, charges and expenses properly incurred by him up to that date in respect of his mortgage security, together with interest thereon, or

(b) declaring the amount so due at that date, and

(c) directing—

(i) that, if the defendant pays into Court the amount so found or declared due on or before such date as the Court may fix within six months from the date on which the Court confirms and countersigns the account taken under clause (a) or from the date on which such amount is declared in Court under clause (b), as the case may be, and thereafter pays such amount as may be adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges and expenses as provided in rule 10, together with subsequent interest on such sums respectively as provided in rule 11, the plaintiff shall deliver up to the defendant, or to such person as the defendant appoints, all docu

means in his possession or power relating to the mortgaged property, and shall, if so required, re-transfer the property to the defendant at his cost free from the mortgage and from all incumbrances created by the plaintiff or any persons claiming under him, or, where the plaintiff claims by derived title, by those under whom he claims, and shall also, if necessary, put the defendant in possession of the property; and

(1) that, if payment of the amount found or declared due under or by the preliminary decree is not made on or before the date so fixed, or the defendant fails to pay, within such time as the Court may fix, the amount adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest, the plaintiff shall be entitled to apply for a final decree debarring the defendant from all right to redeem the property.

(2) The Court may, on good cause shown and upon terms to be fixed by the Court, from time to time, at any time before a final decree is passed, extend the time fixed for the payment of the amount found or declared due under sub-rule (1) or of the amount adjudged due in respect of subsequent costs, charges, expenses and interest.

(3) Where, in a suit for fore-closure, subsequent mortgagees or persons claiming under the rights of, any such mortgagees are parties to the suit, the preliminary decree shall provide for the adjudication of the rights to the suit in the manner and form set forth in Form No. 9 or Form No. 10, as the case may be, of Appendix D with such variations as the circumstances of the case may require.

N 11—For its amendments in Bombay and Rangoon, vide infra.

Notes—Rules 2 to 8 have been added by Act 21 of 1929. The reason of the amendment has been thus stated by the Special Committee—

This order relates to mortgage suits and its provisions were originally in the Transfer of Property Act (sections 85 to 92) but were transferred to the Code of Civil Procedure in 1908. The amendment of the Transfer of Property Act particularly the provisions relating to mortgage, necessitates the amendment of rules 2 to 8, 10, 11 and 15 of the Order.

We propose to make the following amendments in this rule, viz:—

(1) It should be expressly stated that the decree passed under this rule is "preliminary."

Under sections 73 and 76 of the Transfer of Property Act, a mortgagee is authorised to spend money for certain necessary purposes in connection with the mortgage security. Under section 63 A of the Transfer of Property Act, it is proposed to be added, a mortgagee is allowed to spend money for improvements in certain circumstances. The above provisions a mortgagee should be added to the principal sum due to the mortgagor, together with interest thereon, must be taken into account in the final decree. Clause (b) of the same due to the mortgagor, together with interest thereon, must be taken into account in the final decree. This of the same due to the mortgagor, together with interest thereon, must be taken into account in the final decree. This seems anomalous. There is no reason why a mortgagee should lose subsequent costs charges and expenses where the Court declares the amount. The scheme of Order XXXIV of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, is to draw a clear distinction between a preliminary and a final decree, rule 2 is amended to make it clear that the amount to be declared or found due on taking accounts should be up to the date of the preliminary decree. The defendant will then be in a position to know what sum he has to pay in order to claim redemption. Care is taken to provide in clause (c) of sub rule (1) of the amended rule that after tendering the amount so declared or found to be due, the defendant has to pay the amount which the Court may adjudge for subsequent interest and subsequent costs, charges and expenses. Rules 10 and 11 have been amended to empower a Court to adjudge the amount due in respect of such interest and costs.

(4) Although clause (a) of this rule refers to the date fixed for payment of the amount found to be due on taking accounts, clause (c) refers the date within six months from the date of the declaration of the amount due by the Court under . . . . . for payment must be . . . . . amount due or, where . . . . . account is confirmed by the Court. Our amendment makes this clear.

(5) As the mortgagor or any other person seeking redemption has to bear all costs and expenses of the redemption, in clause (c) of sub rule (1) it is made clear that the cost of re conveyance or re transfer by the mortgagee on payment of the amount due by the mortgagor shall be borne by the mortgagor or such other person.

(6) The proviso to sub rule 2 to rule 3 provides for the extension of the time fixed for payment in the final decree. The power of the Court to extend the time fixed for payment is well recognised and is exercised at any time before a final decree for foreclosure is passed. The proper place for this provision is in the rule relating to the preliminary decree. The proviso is therefore, placed in rule 2 as sub rule (2). The expression 'postpone the day' in this proviso has been replaced by the words 'extend the time' to make it clear that the time can be extended even after the expiry of the period once fixed. Sub rule (2) also makes it clear that the extension of the time fixed for payment must be subject to such terms as the Court may fix. It is not fair that after the plaintiff has obtained a decree for payment of the amount due on the mortgage and when the payment has been already postponed for six months, the plaintiff should be made to wait for payment for a further period without getting compensation. A defendant who applies for an extension of time must be put on terms before his application is granted.

(7) As clauses (a) and (b) of sub rule (1) will provide for the adjudication of the amount due to a mortgagee till the date of the preliminary decree, in sub rule (1) clause (c) it is made clear that after the payment of that amount the defendant is bound to pay subsequent costs and subsequent interest due to the plaintiff till the date of actual payment, which may be on or before date fixed in the preliminary decree or such other date to which the time for payment may have been extended under sub rule (2). It has been well established that the mortgagee can add to mortgagee money the amount spent by him between the passing of the preliminary decree and the final decree. (1 L R 44 Cal 448)

mortgagor to redeem the mortgaged passed (1 L R 27 Cal 705)
e preliminary decree for payment or on the day to which the time for payment may have been extended by the Court does not ipso facto extinguish the mortgagor's right of redemption. It is open to a mortgagor to apply for extension of time till a final decree for foreclosure has been passed, and he can do so even after the expiry of the period once fixed (1 L R 39 Mad 882, 28 Bom 102). Clause (d) of rule 2, as at present worded, is not consistent with the above rulings. It provides that if payment, as provided in the rule is not made, the defendant will be debarred from all right to redeem the property. In sub rule (2) of the amended rule therefore, it is made clear that on non payment of the amount due, the plaintiff will be . . . . . We propose to make it clear that . . . . . arises not only when the amount . . . . . is not paid in full, but also if any . . . . . quent interest remains to be paid . . . . .

(9) Rules 2 & 8 of Order XXXIV do not specifically provide for decrees in suits for foreclosure or sale in which, besides the mortgagor other persons who are entitled to redeem such as subsequent mortgagees or persons subrogated to their rights, are remedied by providing forms for annex D to the Code. Under Order 3, forms are not binding and can be varied by itself is necessary of varied type and that in such cases forms given in the may require Pro- sub rule (3) of rule 4. Consequential

In a redemption suit by a mortgagor such difficulties will not arise. Subsequent amendments have been made in rules 7 and 8 made in rule 2. For the reasons payment by the sure is actually passed. It is also made clear that on payment of the amount decreed or found to be due in the preliminary decree together with the amount due for the subsequent costs of the mortgagor, property. The provisions to avoid difficulties which words to that article of limitation rule (3) of the suit or the defendant, not suit also is discharged and is to vest the mortgaged not only the debt due on the ought to enforce it. It is y, should extinguish in toto

the whole of the liability of the mortgagor

We propose to amend this rule which relates to a preliminary decree for sale, on the lines of rule 7. As by the amendment in the Transfer of Property Act it is proposed to allow the remedy of foreclosure only in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale and in an anomalous mortgage providing the remedy of foreclosure, the power of the Court to grant the alternative relief of sale can only be exercised in the case of such an anomalous mortgage. By the very nature of the mortgage by conditional sale the Court cannot order a sale of the property. We propose to amend clause (2) by stating clearly that it applies only to an anomalous mortgage which provides for foreclosure. Sub rule (3) is added to rule 4 on the same lines as rule 2 (3). It provides for a case where, besides the mortgagor, there are other parties in a suit for sale.

It should, however, be noted that in the case of a decree for sale there is no sale. Even after the sale is made before the confirmation of Courts to enlarge the time words gave rise to the view that an order absolute under the section had the effect of extinguishing rights under not extinguished by the mere passing Gulam Syedur 43 I A 465 at p at the right of a mortgagor to redeem in execution of the decree passed against him under rule 4 or rule 7. We have, however made a provision for compensating the purchaser when a mortgagor seeks to redeem after the sale has taken place but before it is confirmed.

The words 'any such sale' in rule 6 and its position after rules 3 to 5 led to the view being taken that the personal decree for the balance of the amount due to a mortgagor after the sale can only be passed in a suit by a mortgagee for sale, and not in a redemption suit by a mortgagor, although in a redemption decree in default of payment by the mortgagor a sale of the mortgaged property can be ordered. In 1 L. R. 42 Cal. 294, it is held that as this rule does not require an application by a mortgagee for the passing of a personal decree for the balance of the mortgage money, no period of limitation applies for claiming such relief. This is not followed by other Courts (1 L. R. 40 All. 551). This point is made clear by introducing the words "on application by the plaintiff" in rule 6, and the words "on application by the defendant" in rule 8A.—Report of the Special Committee

Report of the Select Committee. "We are not convinced by the reasons given by the Special Committee for deciding not to insert a provision giving the Court power to extend the time for the payment of the amount due from a mortgagor after a preliminary decree for the sale of the mortgaged property has been passed. We think this is a power which the Court may well be trusted to exercise in proper cases and on proper terms. We have, therefore inserted a new sub-rule as sub-rule (2) in this rule on the line of sub-clause (ii) of clause (c) in sub-rule (1) of rule 2. Sub-rules (2) and (3) of the present rule have therefore been renumbered as sub-rules (3) and (4). Abuse of such a provision is prevented by providing that the extension of time cannot be granted after the final decree for sale has been actually passed."

Rule 5—We have added the words 'if a decree has been passed in order' after the words "pass a final decree" in sub-rule (1). As the sub-rule stands at present it contemplates the passing of another final decree in favour of a mortgagor who makes payment after a final decree for sale has been passed at the instance of the mortgagee, or to retransfer the mortgaged property are orders in execution and there is no necessity for the Court to pass another decree.—Report of the Select Committee of any matter agreed to be referred, any party to such suit may, at the earliest possible opportunity and in all cases where issues are settled at or before such settlement, apply to the Court to stay the matter should not be referred in accordance with the agreement to refer to arbitration and that the applicant was at the time when the suit was instituted and still remains ready and willing to do all things necessary to the proper conduct of the arbitration may make an order staying the suit.

Scope—Where parties refer disputes to arbitration but subsequently one of them

The award so made should be brought up before the court under para 20, the court
